CHRISTMAS DOINGS.

HOW THE DAY WAS PASSED.

Gentlemen's Visitation—Races on the Potomac—Entertainments at Old-Fellows' Hall, Abner's, and Other Places—The Orphans Remembered, &c.

The Christmas holiday was observed here very quietly.

The pleasant weather attracted a large number of people to the streets.

The small boys (and also the large boys) made things lively with their horns when no policeman was around.

Some of the youngsters, in the excitement, tried to properly celebrate the day, procured fire-crackers and let them off to their own great satisfaction and the confusion of the horses.

The theatres were filled with delighted audiences, and all sorts of recreations were crowded with pleasure-seekers.

The bar-rooms did a lively business, and were, of course, the popular drink, was freely dispensed, and, in consequence, there will be to-day a full quota of headache.

In spite of this, however, there was but little drunkenness observed in the streets, and the liquid part of the celebration was done in moderation.

The recreation in the home circle and the Christmas celebration in private houses was the feature of the day, and the large majority of our citizens spent the day in quiet social enjoyment at their homes.

How Gentlemen Spent Christmas.

The holiday was spent by the counsel in the Guitau case in preparing for the trial, which will be resumed to-day.

The testimony in the case is all in, and the closing argument by counsel will probably begin to-day.

Mr. Seville is arranging and classifying the facts as brought out in evidence for presentation to the jury.

His argument will be a careful review of the case, and will probably consume some days in its delivery.

His mail will continue very large, and the communications for the prisoner rather increase than decrease.

He received yesterday a small box by mail addressed to Guitau, which, as he has been accustomed to do with all such packages, he handed over to that happened to put in an appearance. This man was a young man who was on his way to the duty devolved of opening the mysterious package.

THE FIRST NEWSPAPER MAN

After throwing it against a brick wall and allowing an American to run over it, the package was opened and revealed to his timorous eyes two two large bottles of champagne, one of which he gave to a friend.

The prisoner, who was a young man, was a quiet, reserved, and somewhat reserved man.
